Music Therapy

1. Books and other materials

Books on music have the classmarks (shelf location numbers) between 780 and 789, and are on the 3rd floor. Always check Quick Search on the Library website (<http://www.libweb.anglia.ac.uk>) for full details, but here are some useful general classmarks for browsing the shelves:

780.7	Music education and teaching
786	Keyboard and percussion instruments and their music
787	Stringed instruments and their music
788	Woodwind and brass instruments and their music

You will also need this section, on the 2nd floor:
615.85154 Music therapy

Scores are shelved on the 1st floor of the library. Classmarks parallel those for books, e.g. you will find scores for teaching at 780.7, and music for strings at 787. Scores usually have a long loan period of 10 weeks (books are 1 or 3 weeks). Some large twentieth century composers' scores are kept in a cabinet to the right of the stairs by the lift on the first floor. Stockhausen scores are kept in a separate cabinet to the left of the same stairs. The catalogue should show if the music you need is in one of these cabinets, but ask Library staff if you are having difficulties.

Recordings are also kept on the 1st floor, and are mostly on CD, with a small number of vinyl LPs and audiotapes. There are also music-related films and television programmes in our DVD and videotape collections. Borrowing of all recordings is free, and there are also facilities for viewing and listening in the Library.

Searching for the format you want can often be done simply by putting a variety of words into the Quick Search. You can put 'cd' 'dvd' 'vocal score' etc. into the search box along with the name of the composer or author or, in the case of a recording, the performer.

2. E-Books

The University Library includes access to e-books, which appear along with the printed books in the website's Quick Search results. You can filter search results to see only e-books by using the "Limit to" drop-down box.

Log in to access their contents.

3. Reference Books

There is a small general Reference collection on the 2nd floor of the Library near the Enquiries Desk.

The 29-volume New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians is kept near the scores collection on the 1st floor. (It is also available online – see 5 below)

Other reference books, such as Garland Encyclopedia of World Music, are shelved in the main book collection.

A great deal of reference material is also available online via the Library website.

4. Journals

Journals relevant to Music and Music Therapy currently stocked at the Cambridge Site library include those listed below. We also stock a selection of British and European newspapers.

Titles marked * are also available electronically. An e-journal may offer either a longer or shorter run than the corresponding print journal. Look up a title in the Journal Finder search on the Web-site to see how many years' coverage we have.

To find articles on a topic, try searching relevant databases (see 5 below).

5. Databases

To search the Library's electronic databases, log in and either choose Advanced Search on the website (<http://www.libweb.anglia.ac.uk>), choose Music and Performing Arts as subject and then Music Therapy as a sub-category and view a list of relevant databases and other online resources, or use the Database Finder to choose and search a single database.

Our databases give access to high-quality material, especially academic journal articles. The Digital Library will link you to the full text where it is available electronically; you will need to check availability for print journals. Some databases also list books, theses and web resources.

Where the Library cannot supply full text, you can order a copy of an article or the loan of a book by Inter-Library Loan for a charge of £2. There are details on the website at <http://libweb.anglia.ac.uk/services/ill.htm>

Key databases covering Music and Music Therapy include:

Academic OneFile – covers all subject areas and gives a high proportion of full text. It lists over 43,000,000 articles, for dates ranging from 1980 to 2011.

CINAHL – covers nursing, health support services and social sciences. International coverage, using US spelling and terminology

JSTOR – complete archives of over 1,000 academic journals, in full text; good coverage of arts & humanities.

Medline – from the US National Library of Medicine, premier source for index and abstract coverage of biomedical literature

PsycINFO – wide coverage of psychology and related disciplines

RILM abstracts of music literature (Revue Internationale de Litterature Musicale) - premier academic database of music scholarship, covering 1967 –present

Other useful online resources include:

ASSIA : Applied Social Sciences Index and Abstracts – international coverage but a UK bias

BEI : British Education Index – includes music education

BHI (British Humanities Index) – references to British journal and newspaper articles on a broad range of humanities areas

COPAC – combined catalogue of leading university and research libraries in Britain and Ireland

ERIC – education database, with US bias

Google Scholar – academic Google search, which links to full text articles where available

Index to Theses – details of theses accepted for higher degrees by British and Irish universities

Intute – a collection of web resources, evaluated by subject specialists from seven universities

Oxford Music Online – including the Grove Dictionary, Oxford Companion to Music and Oxford Dictionary of Music

ZETOC – tables of contents details of about 20,000 journals from 1993-present

6. Research

Current research in your subject can be traced using the databases above. COPAC and Index to Theses are comprehensive, though they will give little full text. Intute and other subject gateways (collections of evaluated web resources) can help locate relevant organisations and web-sites.

7. Other Libraries

To search other libraries' catalogues from the University Library website, click first on Interlibrary Loan, under Digital Library, then Catalogues of other libraries.

To find out about visiting other libraries, click on Using other libraries under Help and Advice.
